Remembering in different ways

With ANZAC Day and the centenary of the Gallipoli landing just over a week away Bega Valley Shire Council libraries and the Regional Gallery are remembering Australians in conflict, particularly in World War One.

The Shire's Library Service is commemorating the centenary with honour boards listing the names of 185 local servicemen who lost their lives in World War One and installation of a 'field' of knitted and crocheted poppies outside the Bega Valley Regional Gallery and Bega library on Friday 24 April.

Meanwhile, the Bega Valley Regional Gallery will focus on how Australians are still engaged internationally in contemporary conflicts with the Shaun Gladwell 'Portraits from Afghanistan' exhibition from 24 April to 13 June.

Author and award winning journalist, Steve Sailah will be at Bega library on Tuesday 21 April to talk about his new novel 'A Fatal Tide'. Set in Gallipoli, the novel is part war-story and part mystery and is described as a compelling and fast-paced read.

Well-known local historian, Peter Lacey believes the women and children from the state's South Coast deserve equal recognition as 'heroes' of World War One. In a fascinating free talk at Merimbula library on Tuesday 21 April Peter will reveal the reason why.

Curalo Lake Pathway

Eden residents can learn about progress on the Lake Curalo shared pathway project at an upcoming information session in Eden.

The session will inform local residents of the planned steps to completion involving collaborative opportunities for local community groups wanting to be involved in the project.

Come along for a chance to ask Council staff about the proposed extent and timing of the works and to provide us with your feedback on the plans.

We'll be talking about opportunities for community participation in reserve management works, indicating types and areas of improvements that may be undertaken.

The drop-in information session will be held at the Eden Log Cabin on the corner of Maling and Bass Streets on Thursday 30 April between 3 and 5.30pm.
